

Insurance Company Relative Size

An important decision to consider is the size of the carrier and its respective participating fund. The fund's ability to consistently absorb market downturns and deploy capital in opportune times will be an important factor in its investment strategy. Though this is not determined by carrier size, it is a factor to consider when making long-term investments in a participating fund.

Approx. size of the company based on Assets under Management (only Life Insurance and Wealth Management segment)